Application of the Language and Concepts of Academic Argumentation	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Sparse use in the classroom of the language and concepts of academic argumentation</li> <li>* Often or occasionally inconsistent or inaccurate use of argumentation language and concepts</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Partial, sporadic use in the classroom of the language and concepts of academic argumentation</li> <li>* Mostly consistent, mostly accurate use of argumentation language and concepts</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Regular use in the classroom of the language and concepts of academic argumentation</li> <li>* Consistent and highly accurate use of argumentation language and concepts</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Extensive and thoroughly adapted use in the classroom of the language and concepts of academic argumentation</li> <li>* Consistent, accurate, and insightful use of argumentation language and concepts</li> </ul>
Implementation of a Rigorous Standard of Evidence	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Classroom implementation of argument-centered instruction lacks a rigorous standard of evidence</li> <li>* Opportunities consistently missed to push students to produce evidence that is more closely aligned with their claims, more credible, or more sufficient</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Classroom implementation has an inconsistently applied, or partially rigorous, standard of evidence</li> <li>* Some opportunities missed to push students to produce evidence that is more closely aligned with their claims, more credible, or more sufficient</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Consistent, regular application of a rigorous standard of evidence in the classroom</li> <li>* Almost all opportunities taken advantage of to push students to produce evidence that is closely aligned with their claims, highly credible, and sufficient</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Especially thorough application of a rigorous standard of evidence, often resulting in evidence that is analyzed or debated closely</li> <li>* Pervasive, accepted standard of evidence throughout the class to produce evidence that is closely aligned with claims, highly credible, and sufficient</li> </ul>
Implementation of a Rigorous Standard of Refutation and Critical Thinking	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Classroom implementation of argument-centered instruction lacks a rigorous standard of refutation</li> <li>* Opportunities consistently missed to push students to produce refutation that is more responsive, more comprehensive, and exhibits more depth of thinking</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Classroom implementation has an inconsistently applied, or partially rigorous, standard of refutation</li> <li>* Some opportunities missed to push students to produce refutation that is responsive, comprehensive, and reflective of deep critical thinking</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Consistent, regular application of a rigorous standard of refutation in the classroom</li> <li>* Frequent and appropriate instances during classroom instruction of refutation and critical thinking that is responsive, comprehensive, and deep</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Especially thorough application of a rigorous standard of refutation throughout classroom instruction</li> <li>* Pervasive, accepted standard of refutation throughout the classroom, that leads to student-initiated, rigorous instances of refutation and critical thinking</li> </ul>
Use of Argument-Centered Questioning and Discussion Techniques	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Little to no use of argument-centered questioning and discussion techniques</li> <li>* Questions posed by the teacher do not require that students make arguments</li> <li>* Little to no reflective, text-based discussion is generated</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Some, partially effective use of argument-centered questioning &amp; discussion techniques</li> <li>* Students may not be aware that they are being asked to make or engage with arguments</li> <li>* Partial student participation; discussion may be either teacher-dominated or dominated by a few students</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Effective use of argument-centered questioning and discussion techniques</li> <li>* Teacher asks a blend of higher- and lower-order thinking questions</li> <li>* Most or almost all students participate; some discussion and argumentation occurs between students; almost all discussion is substantive and argument-based</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Argument-centered questioning and discussion techniques consistently push student thinking</li> <li>* Student-generated questions or discussion leadership is important</li> <li>* Almost all students participate in a highly student-centered discussion structure; insights are created or articulated by students, and there is robust engagement between students</li> </ul>
Effective Management of Argument-Centered Projects and Activities	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Ineffective management of argument-centered projects and activities</li> <li>* Pacing of argument-centered activities is deficient</li> <li>* Students are often unengaged and inactive</li> <li>* Students are frequently unsure of directions and tasks</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Partially effective management of argument-centered projects and activities</li> <li>* Pacing of argument-centered activities is imprecise (either bogged down or rushed)</li> <li>* Students are occasionally unengaged or inactive</li> <li>* Students can mostly follow the directions and task descriptions</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Effective management of argument-centered projects and activities</li> <li>* Pacing of argument-centered activities is appropriate</li> <li>* Almost all students are consistently engaged or active, reflecting some differentiation</li> <li>* Directions and task descriptions are well understood</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Fluid, unobtrusive, and highly effective management of argument-centered projects and activities</li> <li>* Implementation flexibly conforms to student response and is appropriately differentiated</li> <li>* Almost all students are highly engaged and active</li> </ul>
Feedback to Students on Their Argumentation	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Little to no feedback given to students on their argumentation</li> <li>* Feedback that is given is often not timely, not specific, or not apt</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Partial, occasional feedback given to students on their argumentation</li> <li>* Feedback is sometimes timely, partially specific, and occasionally apt</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Regular, consistent feedback given to students on their argumentation</li> <li>* Feedback is almost always timely, specific, and apt</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>* Rigorously frequent, sometimes real-time feedback given to students on their argumentation</li> <li>* Feedback insightful, specific, connected to consistent criteria, and contributive to student performance gains</li> <li>* Effective feedback provided both to individuals and to whole classes</li> </ul>
